Statements on Academic Freedom, Responsibility and Tenure by the America Association of State Colleges and Universities, November.1971

Stockton University as a member of AASCU endorses the following statements.

"Introduction

The purposes of these Statements are to clarify and to promote understanding a support of academic freedom and responsibility, and academic tenure.

Institutions of higher education are conducted for the common good and not necessari to further the specific interests of either the individual or the institution as a whole. The common good depends upon the free search for and the exposition of truth an understanding wherever and whenever they may be found.

The freedoms granted by the First Amendment to the Constitution of the United State are indispensable to a democratic society. Within the academic community, the vigorous exercise of these freedoms by its membeto participate in the democratic process of government as citizens, to learn and to teach what scholarsh

By its nature, no freedom is absolute. Academic freedom is no more absolute than ar other. It is protected in order that academic people may perform a vital social role, not it order to create a privileged class. It does not afford any special protection to those whether the service of the counterpart and condition of academic freedom. The academic community which asks protection from outside interference in order to perform its mission must not tolerate sabotage of that mission be its own members.

Governing boards are respsible for establishing overall policy and interpreting the institution to the public and the public to the institution. Faculty, as the professional staff, whether their roles be instructional or administrative, must reserve freedom for all in the acade in community, as well as interpret it to the public. Those who teach and those who administer must be faithful to the canons of their calling, utilizing the best their' disciplines have yielded, in order that their commitment may be respected by others. Eah must play his role under setting posed constraints which preserve the fabric of, civilized life. All must protect the right of dissent, including dissent from dissent. However, no one can be accorded, the privilege, under any pretext, of exercising h self-defined rights at the cost of those rights which by common consent and usag belong to all.

Academic freedom and responsibility are inseparable, and must be considered simultaneously; they are shared by all members of the academic community. Tenure however, is a specific provision Of employment which may be accorded to those members of the academic community who qualify for it Therefore, academic tenure should be considered separately from academic freedom and responsibility.

These Statements are commed primarily with the faculty members (teachers, researchers and administrators) of the academic community. However, it is recognize that students also must enjoy academic freedom, and must realize that this freedo carries concomitant responsibilities.

Academic Freedom and Responsibility

Academic freedom is the right of all members of the academic community freely to study, discuss, investigate, teach, conduct research, publish and administer. It is the responsibility of administrators to protect and as

However, academic freedom should be distinguished clearly from itational freedom, which all citizens enjoy equally under the law. Academic freedom is an additional assurance to those who teach and pursue known that, properly should be restricted to rights of expression pertaining to teaching and resentain wit their areas of recognized professional competencies. Beyond this, expressions to members of the academic community should carry no more weight or protection that that accorded any other citizen under the guarantee of constitutional rights: that is outside of one's professional field, one must accept the same responsibility which a other individuals bear for their acts and utterances. In these cases, there is and should no guaranteed immunity from possible criticism under the guise of academic o
