Seasons of Change: NSF Reissues Proposal and Award Policies and Procedures Guide for 2019

by Graef, Frank, GRANTWEEK

Fall is a time of change: leaves turning, days shortening, and of course, modifications to the Proposal and Award Policies and Procedures Guide \(PAPPG\). The National Science Foundation (NSF) made the 2019 version of its overarching grant management policy public at the beginning of November.

However, it is not binding yet, and becomes effective for all proposals submitted, or due, on or after January 28, 2019.

The most newsworthy changes from last year are the official implementation of NSF's policy on sexual harassment and a determination of harassment regarding an NSF funded principal investigator (PI) or co-PI. Awardee institutions must also notify NSF of any action taken by the school, including being placed on administrative leave. Reports must be followed within 10 business days from the date of the finding/determination, or the date of the placement of a PI or co-PI by the awardee on administrative leave or the imposition of an administrative action, whichever is sooner. After receiving the notification, NSF has the authority to substitute the PI, reduce the award to the institution, or terminate the award, depending on circumstances.

Other changes include the following:

OceanFirst Foundation Major Grants

Deadline: March 1, 2019 - Letter of Intent (required)
Organizations may request 1 major grant per year.

Estimated Total Program Funding: $5,001 or more for program or project support.

Abstract:
